The 6th Franco-Japanese workshop on Few-body Problems in Physics from Atoms to Quarks will be hosted by IPHC-Strasbourg (Strasbourg, France) from 3-7 May 2027. This meeting follows on from ones in Osaka (2026) , in Caen (2025), Sendai (2023),...

The workshop will run across the four days (Monday - Friday) with a day break on Thursday 6th May (national Holliday). It will consist principally of relatively long presentations (around 40 mins) with ample time (~20 mins) for questions and discussions. As in previous editions of the workshop the atmosphere will be relatively informal. Please indicate when registering the days you will be present.

We recommend that you arrange to arrive in Strasbourg on the Sunday. There are several options to arrive to Strasbourg:

1) There is a small airport close to Strasbourg Strasbourg - Entzheim Airport (SXB), mainly serving local European flights

2) There are two international airports close to Strabourg, connected by bus or train: Frankfurt International Airport (FRA) (~2h30 by bus/train) and Basel-Mulhouse (1 h by train)

3) Via Paris - Charles de Gaulle International Airport (CDG), connecting by fast train (~2 hours)

Potential speakers are requested to indicate when registering if they wish to make a presentation and propose a title. If you prefer to make a shorter presentation please indicate so when registering (number of minutes required without questions/discussion).

Participants are requested to register by 1 April, 2027 at the latest.

Information on travel to Strasbourg and how to reach IPHC-Strasbourg is provided in the accompanying pages of this site.

Getting to Strasbourg

By air

Via -Mulhouse Airport (BSL-MLH)

Basel-Mulhouse airport is 130 km from Strasbourg. One can reach airport by train (1h30) or bus from Strasbourg station.

Via Frankfurt International Airport (FRA)

The other very large international airport close to Strasbourg is Frankfurt Airport (FRA). From FRA, one can reach Strasbourg using, for instance, Lufthansa Express Buses (which takes ~2h30 with 6 shuttles per day), Flixbus (budget option). There are also hourly train connections from Frankfurt Airport to Strasbourg with change in Offenburg, and every other hour, there are also trains from Mannheim to Strasbourg.

Via Paris - Charles de Gaulle International Airport (CDG)

The largest international airport in France is Paris Charles de Gaulle International Airport (CDG). International flights from almost all Europe, America, Africa, and Asia arrive to CDG. From CDG, one can reach Strasbourg using a high-speed train in about 2h (7 TGVs per day).

Via Strasbourg - Entzheim Airport (SXB)

The Strasbourg-Entzheim International Airport (SXB) is just 10-km away from Strasbourg's city centre and offers many direct flights to European cities (including Amsterdam, Athens, London, Madrid, Rome and Warsaw). From SXB, it takes less than 10 mins to reach the city centre by local train (~5 local trains per hour between 6:00 and 21:00 for 4.70€).

By train

Strasbourg is connected to Paris (Gare de l'Est) by a high-speed train called TGV (train à grande vitesse). Paris-Strasbourg is 1h45' with 16 daily return services.

Keep also in mind that public transportation is great in Strasbourg and once in the city, a car is more cumbersome than useful.
